

From: Jeff Jarrard
To: Microsoft Settlement
Date: 1/28/02 11:25pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Jeff Jarrard
601 S Washington St. Apt. 407
Seattle, WA 98104

January 28, 2002

Microsoft Settlement
U.S. Department of Justice-Antitrust Division
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530

Dear Microsoft Settlement:

The Microsoft trial squandered taxpayers' dollars, was a nuisance to consumers, and a serious deterrent to investors in the high-tech industry. It is high time for this trial, and the wasteful spending accompanying it, to be over. Consumers will indeed see competition in the marketplace, rather than the courtroom. And the investors who propel our economy can finally breathe a sigh of relief.

Upwards of 60% of Americans thought the federal government should not have broken up Microsoft. If the case is finally over, companies like Microsoft can get back into the business of innovating and creating better products for consumers, and not wasting valuable resources on litigation.

Competition means creating better goods and offering superior services to consumers. With government out of the business of stifling progress and tying the hands of corporations, consumers - rather than bureaucrats and judges - will once again pick the winners and losers on Wall Street. With the reins off the high-tech industry, more entrepreneurs will be encouraged to create new and competitive products and technologies.

It should also be noted that the explosive growth in the host count on the Internet, the boom in new technology and innovative new business models (such as the one from which I am sending this message) were made possible by Microsoft's Internet Explorer, not Netscape. The Internet was a fledgling, hard-to-use network closed to the "average American" before Microsoft included I.E. in Windows 95. It was nothing more than a hobbyists pastime until then.

Thank you for this opportunity to share my views.

Sincerely,

Jeff Jarrard